Staff reported that the County has been working on initiating a transportation/transit study and recommended that an early action item could be to engage the consultant they have identified and start including the municipalities in the discussions to gather the needed information, which also includes an IGA with CDOT. The cost will be $100,000 to $150,000 for the study and this early action may help move that along. Commissioner Thomas expressed concern that the County might be competing with the private sector or other organizations already providing a service. Staff responded that those organizations would likely welcome the study and would want to be partners, which could increase their funding opportunities that have been dec the plan, and the role the consultant would have.on also included working with RTD to encourage them to invest in the study and the feasibility of a public private partnership so county residents can actually get something back from the money paid to RTD; costs for a DC Link system for all communities (estimated to be $9-$12 million/year); the potential funding sources and meeting with the subregional group to determine participation interest and feedback on ideas.

The findings were that the organic materials were 100% effective, however, staff reported that the cost is significant ($1,600/year for organic vs $400/year for synthetic) and the materials require more frequent application, resulting in additional staff time. Commissioner Laydon expressed his view that the County should, based on the studies and research that there are alternatives that could be healthier for citizens, it should be done. Also, based on the small amount of the materials actually used by the County the impact would not be that significant. Commissioner Teal stated that he did not feel that there is an environmental impact because of the small amount of the existing chemical use, however, he would go along with the others if staff recommends using these alternative materials. Staff is prepared to draft a scope of services proposal to discuss with the Water Commission and to also have them consider working with Forsgren. Also discussed was an aggressive driver awareness campaign for further public safety education in cooperation with the schools, other government entities, and law enforcement (like the Alive at 25 program). The Board provided a brief history of the efforts so far with the Consultant HR Green to prepare to take advantage of the grant opportunities from the $68 million ARPA funding. Many of these applications and efforts have stalled for many reasons and changes in federal guidance related to ARPA funds has resulted in the County not able to meet the required deadlines. Staff learned of an unexpected opportunity from BEAD funding in the amount of $826 million coming to Colorado that is intended to cover all underserved and unserved properties not just in Douglas County but all of Colorado, with the thought that the County is in a very competitive position for these funds and that opportunity will be pursued.
